OUR MISSION

The Medical Association for Prevention of War (Australia) is a national, professional not-for-profit organisation that works to promote peace and disarmament.

MAPW's mission is to reduce the physical and psychological impact, as well as environmental effect, of wars throughout the world.

We promote solutions through advocacy, education and partnerships.

We acknowledge the Traditional Owners of the lands on which we work and pay our respects to elders past, present, and emerging. MAPW recognises the ongoing impacts on Aboriginal people of being dispossessed of their land by armed conflict.

MAPW is the founder of the 2017 Nobel Peace Prize Laureate, the International Campaign to Abolish Nuclear Weapons.

MAPW is an affiliate of 1985 Nobel Peace Prize Laureate International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War (IPPNW).

MAPW has had a dynamic year again, with many activities to shed a light on some of the forces that profit from, promote and prolong armed violence in our world.

We've campaigned particularly to expose Australia's role in war profiteering and to advocate for change. As ever, nuclear weapons abolition remains our key campaign focus. The urgent need for climate action to avert a more dangerous world is an increasing one.

If you've helped us in all this – and just being a member is a big help – sincere thanks. If you haven't yet, please join us now! Groups like MAPW are needed more than ever.

Dr Sue Wareham OAM
President, MAPW

ACTIONS FOR PEACE

Nuclear weapons abolition

- Regular talks and published letters, articles and news items Australia-wide
- Successful advocacy for health professionals, professional colleges and organisations to endorse the UN Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons
- Awarded $10 000 from the Jessie Street Trust to develop and launch the Quit Nukes nuclear weapon divestment campaign

Militarism, especially the impact of weapons companies

- Founding member of the Australian Arms Control Coalition, a group including Save the Children, Oxfam Australia, Human Rights Watch Australia, and the Australian Centre for International Justice. The Coalition advocates for better controls of Australian arms exports and cessation of exports to the Saudi-led coalition bombing Yemen, generating media coverage and political attention
- Australia: Stop Arms Promotion (ASAP) project generated media and public attention to the Australian War Memorial's commercial partnerships with war profiteers, Melbourne University's collaboration with Lockheed Martin, and the Avalon arms fair
- Intern Lisa Coulthard produced original research on the intrusion of weapons companies into STEM education in schools

War and insecurity

- Media and public commentary in opposition to US hostilities towards Iran, and Australian involvement with military action in the Strait of Hormuz
- Engagement with Australian government about humanitarian consequences of the war in Yemen and Australia's role in arming Saudi-led coalition
- Engagement with parliamentarians on LAWS (lethal autonomous weapons systems, or killer robots)
- Engagement with the Indian and Pakistani High Commissions about the crisis in Kashmir
- Launched a collaboration with the History Teachers Association of Victoria, a project on the long term impacts of World War 1
- Developed and launched an interactive guide to Alice Springs' local World War 1 stories
- Engagement with Foreign Minister on violence and suppression in West Papua
- Local actions for peace in South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania

Nuclear power and nuclear waste

- Submissions and testimony to parliamentary inquiries in response to renewed calls for nuclear power in Australia
- Ongoing advocacy against plans for nuclear waste dumping, and engagement with affected communities

Climate

- Advocacy on the link between conflict and climate crisis, participation in local and national actions, endorsement of climate campaigns

Refugees

- Advocacy in support of the Medevac Bill to allow refugees to receive appropriate health care

Whistle-blowers

- Public and media commentary in support of whistle-blowers, such as David McBride who exposed unlawful activities of Australia's elite special forces in Afghanistan

Peace Research

- Submission to the Australian and New Zealand Standard Research Classification Review 2019 to advocate that peace studies be recognised in academic codes as a distinct discipline

MAPW made some noise about Melbourne University's partnership with nuclear weapons company, Lockheed Martin, at the uni open day, August 2019.

QUIT NUKES

Quit Nukes launched in October 2019 by recognising Australia's nuclear weapon free super funds. Pictured: Margaret Peril (MAPW), Steve Gibbs (Australian Ethical), Gem Romuld (ICAN Australia)

Simon Sheikh (Future Super), Sue Wareham (MAPW), Gem Romuld (ICAN Australia).

The Quit Nukes campaign launched during 2019 Disarmament Week.

Quit Nukes asks Australian superannuation funds to divest completely, across all portfolios, from companies that produce, or support the production or deployment of, nuclear weapons.

Divestment is an integral part of progress towards the total abolition of nuclear weapons.

Divestment stigmatises nuclear weapons, and creates new norms and standards for financial institutions.

Divestment is consistent with principles of responsible investment, and with community expectations about ethical investment: our research found 69% of Australians did not want their superannuation invested in nuclear weapons companies.

Quit Nukes is an initiative of MAPW in collaboration with the International Campaign to Abolish Nuclear Weapons, Australia.

Quit Nukes gratefully acknowledges the support of the Jessie Street Trust. The Trust continues the work of Jessie Street (1889 - 1970), a committed advocate for equal rights and justice for all, elimination of all forms of discrimination, and world peace and disarmament.

MEMBERS & DONORS

MAPW is independent of all political parties, and is funded almost entirely through the commitment of members and the generosity of donors.

Membership is open to professionals and students from all fields of health, and to associates who share our vision. Members lead and drive our campaigns, and provide the expertise and credibility that makes us so effective. We are especially grateful to our long-term members, many of whom have shaped and supported our work for over ten years.

MAPW has received small grants for discrete projects - such as an Alice Springs War Stories app, and the After Armistice educational resource on the enduring effects of WW1 - in 2019. Thank you to our grantmaking partners.

MAPW INCOME 2018-2019

MAPW partnered with the History Teacher's Association of Victoria (HTAV) to produce After Armistice, an educational resource on the enduring effects of World War 1.

After Armistice addresses the long and short term health effects of WW1. MAPW worked closely with HTAV to develop a compelling resource aligned to the Victorian curriculum. We thank Jo Clyne (HTAV), Peter O'Rourke (John Fawcner Secondary College), and Peter Khalil, (Federal Member for Wills) for their collaboration.

MAPW provides campaign assistance and in-kind support to the Australian Campaign to Stop Killer Robots.

Lethal Autonomous Weapons Systems - 'Killer Robots' - are AI-powered weapons that can kill without meaningful human control. The UN has appealed for a ban on these weapons, and dozens of countries around the world have expressed concern.

We support the campaign's efforts to secure a preemptive ban on these weapons. MAPW lends its voice and expertise to the campaign and provides office space in our National HQ.

MAPW founded ICAN in 2007, and continues to provide expertise to this global campaign.

The humanitarian argument for a nuclear ban is at the core of our work for nuclear abolition. In 2018-2019 we brought more health professionals and health organisations into the campaign for the UN nuclear ban treaty, supported the Cities Appeal through our nuclear divestment work, and represented ICAN at events across Australia.
